Evidence

All references, unless otherwise stated, are to documents held by the County Record Office.

1) 1482 Survey of the Manor of Warwick (Z102)L. 1st entry in Hoggisford: the property described has, on its south side, the “way from Waldyche to Lethenhull” [Waldyche = Market Street, Lethenhull = Theatre Street, at this time.]

2) Deed of 1647, in Hoggisford (Birmingham Reference Library DV43/183811) is for a property which has, on its north side, the “Kings Highway from Corn Markett”. [Corn Markett is part of the Market Place, at the top of the Holloway.]

3) All the town maps, published by the Record Office as the Town Maps of Warwick, show the route namely 1610, 1711, 1788, and 1806.

4) the route is shown on a plan of the layout of Warwick, by Henry Couchman, surveyor, and dated 4 February 1790 (QS24/578/15). Although no width is given (as it is for all the roads), there are three pairs of dots, one at each end, and one in the middle.

5) Board of Health Map 1851 (CR1618/W6/55) shows all roads and paths in detail and labels this as “Jetty”, with paving the same as the footways in Market Street, and no barriers.

6) The route is clearly shown on all Ordnance Survey map, e.g. 1887, 1925, and more modern - until the area was redeveloped and the path changed.

7) Borough of Warwick (Market Square) Footpath Diversion Order No.1, 1965: diverted the path from the Gospel Hall to Theatre Street. [The Gospel Hall was by the Market Place.] The new route was needed due to the comprehensive redevelopment of the Market Street area.

8) The route is heavily used by the public as a major pedestrian route in to the town centre and is surfaced with special paving slabs due to part of it being a ramp, and part steps. An ornamental arch has recently been erected to emphasise it as an entrance to the town centre.
